Monthly For March

American Red Cross Month. The American Red Cross plays a vital role in rebuilding communities hit by disaster and providing critical support and resources at home and abroad. As President Barack Obama said in a presidential proclamation in 2011, “During American Red Cross Month, we celebrate our nation’s humanitarian spirit, and we recommit to providing relief and hope in times of crisis.”

Music In Our Schools Month. Sponsored by the National Association for Music Education, Music In Our Schools Month is an annual event that engages music educators, students, and communities from around the country to promote the benefits of high-quality music education programs in schools. The program began as a single day of celebration in New York in 1973 and became a month-long salute to school music in 1985.

National Kidney Month. Kidneys filter 200 liters of blood a day, help regulate blood pressure, and direct red blood cell production. But 1 in 3 Americans is at risk for kidney disease due to diabetes, high blood pressure, or a family history of kidney failure. During National Kidney Month, the National Kidney Foundation offers health activities to promote awareness of kidneys, risk factors, and kidney disease.

Social Work Month. The American social work profession was established in the late 19th century to ensure that immigrants and other vulnerable people gained tools and skills to escape economic and social poverty. Today, the profession of social work helps people in their personal and interpersonal lives and pursues social change to benefit a wide variety of individuals, families, and communities.

Coffee and booze: The genetic history

Scientists studying genetics are investigating two common beverages that are popular around the world. Here's a quick look at what they've found:

- Coffee. Researchers at the Coffee and Caffeine Genetics Consortium (presumably located right near a Starbucks somewhere) have identified six genetic variants that affect our taste for coffee and caffeine, as well as our response to it. Two of these variants may influence the positive effects of caffeine on people. The discovery may help physicians advise people on increasing or decreasing their caffeine consumption for better health.

- Alcohol. We may have developed the ability to process alcohol long before anyone brewed that first keg of beer. Scientists at Santa Fe College in Gainesville, Fla., studied a set of genes related to the enzymes that break down alcohol, and found evidence of a mutation 10 million years ago that enabled our ancestors to safely consume spoiled and fermented fruit on the ground when other food was scarce. This coincides with the days when tree dwellers began moving to the forest floor to live. So did the ability to tolerate booze lead to the rise of human civilization? It's something to think about over happy hour.

World's oldest engraving found on Java shell

Humans and their ancestors have been engraving rocks and shells for millions of years. The latest evidence of this is a 500,000-year-old shell discovered by archaeologists on the island of Java, bearing a zigzag pattern that's older than the weathering on the shell's surface.

The shell would have been engraved by a member of homo erectus, a predecessor to modern humans (homo sapiens). Prior to this find (reported on the Science Daily website), the oldest similar engravings were about 100,000 years old, made by modern humans in Africa. The Java inhabitants apparently drilled holes through the shells of large freshwater mussels using a shark's tooth to open the shellfish up and get at its meat, targeting with precision the correct point at which the shell closes. They ate the meat, then used the shells as knives and other tools.

Asia has so far not been deeply explored for prehistoric artifacts. This find may change that.

SCIENCE CANNOT SOLVE THE ULTIMATE MYSTERY OF NATURE. AND THAT IS BECAUSE, IN THE LAST ANALYSIS, WE OURSELVES ARE A PART OF THE MYSTERY THAT WE ARE TRYING TO SOLVE.
